Monday
Hi de Hi, Ho de Ho,
Where is all our snow-ball snow?
It looks like Spring has come, I guess,
And Winter's come off second best;
Or if it's just a thawing spell,
Winter'll be back, cold like.

Tuesday
All right, so I'm not a wizard;
How'd I know we'd have a blizzard?

"Libraryanna"

Funny thing about the Law library. The more students there are in it, the less noise they make.
When there are eight or ten of them, it's so silent you can hear a pin drop.

When there are four or five,
there's usually a conversation going on in undertones, punctuated with little ripples of laughter.

But when there are only two, the conversation tends to become audible, and the pretty librarian generally leaves the library.

Co-ed: "Wasn't the sleigh ride heavenly?"

Plumber: "Heaven . . . what's that?"

I searched your column through and through,

Hoping at least one joke was new;
And honest, I didn't even begin

To forget my darling Mumbling

For which my thanks are everlasting.

But I'll pay you a compliment, (I feel I should):

Apart from that, your column was good.

Candidates Will Present Platforms at Meeting Tomorrow in Moyse Hall

Discussion Period Five-Minute Talks For Students After

Candidates in the forthcoming elections will have an opportunity to present their platforms to the student public tomorrow afternoon when an election meeting will be held in Moyse Hall for that purpose. In order that the students may become better acquainted with the qualifications of the students for whom they will vote next week, there will be a period following the speeches during which questions from the floor will be answered by the nominees.

Each of the five candidates for the position of President of the Students' Society will be allowed five minutes to outline his platform and will be introduced by one of his supporters, whose time will be limited to two minutes. The two nominees to the position of President of the McGill Union will be presented in a similar fashion if the time allotted for the meeting permits.

Women Speak Later

While women candidates will not speak at this open elections meeting, the nominees for President and Secretary of the Women's Union will have an opportunity to present their platform at the Annual Meeting of the Women's Union; and those for President of the M.W.S.A.A. will be presented at the Banquet to be held next Tuesday.

The recent withdrawal of two of the candidates has reduced the number of those running for the eight major campus posts to twenty-two. The two withdrawals are Jean Mitchell from the candidacy for President of the M.W.S.A.A. and Donald Diplock from the candidacy for President of the Students' Society.

The elections will be held next Wednesday, March 11th, and the eight positions to be filled are: President of the Students' Society, President, Vice-President, and Secretary of the McGill Union, President and Secretary of the Women's Union, President of the M.W.S.A.A. (Continued on Page Four)

Economists To Discuss Trade

Two Students Consider Many Future Aspects

The Political Economy Club will meet tomorrow night in the Union Grill Room. To consider the subject "The Future of International Trade." The speakers, Thomas Walman-Wood and Esmond Goldman, will treat the matter from different view-points.

Walman-Wood will discuss the problem of world trade with specific reference to the condition of Canada in the post-war world. Goldman will treat the topic more generally, outlining a few views of what would be the most desirable method of reconstructing world trade on a basis of fairness to all.

According to one of the speakers, the topic to be discussed is of vital importance. The question of international trade has long been a controversial subject he said and it forms an integral part of the problems of war aims. In the post-war world of reconstruction of international trade will be of prime importance. In order that many factors which have given rise to far-reaching difficulties of the past may be eliminated in a new scheme (Continued on Page Four)

Daily's Anonymity Policy Will Be Discussed Today

Student Body to Meet In Ballroom of Union

The Students' Society will meet this afternoon in the Union Ballroom at 5.15 p.m. This assembly is the direct result of a petition tendered by 175 students who are opposed to the policy of the McGill Daily as it concerns candidates for the elections.

Some time ago the Editorial Board of the Daily announced its intention of omitting from the Letter Forum the true names of all correspondents except such as stated they did not intend to run in the forthcoming elections. Their purpose was to prevent any of the nominees from achieving notoriety by means of letters to the editor. This has been the practice of an element amongst the candidates of the past, it was claimed. However, the name of any correspondent could be had upon demand from the editor.

When the list of nominations was announced on February 25, the Daily's stand was limited, as it had been given out it would be, so as to prohibit only the names of those nominated from appearing in the Letter Forum. It was stated that each candidate would have ample chance to express his opinions and announce his platform at meetings being held especially for this purpose.

This stand on the part of the Editorial Board was immediately condemned by certain of the students as being contrary to all principles of freedom of speech. The enforced anonymity was considered as curtailing the chances of a candidate's presenting himself to the voting body.

A number of letters appeared in the Letter Forum expressing these, and similar opinions. The series was culminated by a petition, signed with the names of at least 175 students, which called upon the Daily Board to surrender its position in this respect, otherwise a meeting of the student body would be called and the whole complaint against the policy aired.

It was subsequently stated by the Editorial Board that the policy would not be discontinued as demanded.

According to their foretold intention, the signatories tendered a petition for a full assembly. Such a meeting, according to the constitution, must be attended by a quorum of one hundred students before any motions may be passed.

During the meeting, six students from McGill and R.V.C. will speak for approximately five minutes on miscellaneous topics. These subjects will be written on pieces of paper and placed in a hat. Each student will then draw his topic at random and after a few minutes of preparation will discuss his subject for five minutes.

Arts Banquet Is To Feature Entertainment as Well as Food

The Faculty of Arts and Science will hold its annual banquet Saturday night in the Faculty Club, the tickets costing $1.00 per person. In contrast to former years the banquet will feature food and entertainment in place of erstwhile speech-making.

The menu will carry everything from hors d'oeuvres to port, including fillet (according to the Executive) mignon.

Featured in the entertainment will be the Princess Buzi Happinta Bira, "a daughter of the gods, divinely tall and most divinely fair." This exotic oriental will perform the dance of the seven veils commencing with veil No. 1 and proceeding in consecutive order to veil No. 7.

Another feature will be the far-famed and time-worn Indian rope trick, which, as everyone knows, and, consequently no one needs to be told, consists in the elevation of a rope towards the ceiling without any visible means of support.

The well-known Montreal singer and piano-accompanist Rolande Desormeaux will present several modern popular

Dr. W. Penfield Gives Warning

Comparisons Are Made Of War Spirits

"It is later than you think," Dr. Wilder G. Penfield declared yesterday in a speech to the Rotary Club. The noted head of the Montreal Neurological Institute, and Chairman of the Department of Neurosurgery in the Medical Faculty at McGill, was referring to the failure of the national war effort to reach its maximum.

Dr. Penfield warned that far too many heads were still in the sand, and that while encouraging figures were everywhere available as far as enlistments in the services, taxation levels, war industries, and war loans were concerned, yet compared with the German and Japanese efforts, and even with our allies in Britain, we were far from doing our best.

In the rest of his speech the Neurologist referred to impressions gained from his recent visit to the British Isles to study the effects of the war on the mental state of the public. He said, "under the harrowing conditions . . . there has been no increase in hysteria, psychoneurosis or insanity among the civilian population of Britain. On the contrary . . . there has been less psychoneurosis than during peacetime." He told of over 2,000 beds originally set aside for an expected rise in cases (Continued on Page Four)

Presbyterian Airman Killed

Theologs Elect President for The Coming Year

Students of the Presbyterian College met last evening in their annual election gathering. The election was preceded by a short memorial service in honour of Sergeant Pilot Ian MacKenzie, R.C.A.F.

MacKenzie left second year Theology at the Presbyterian College two years ago to enlist in the Air Force and was reported killed in action overseas last Friday. He is the second P.C. man to lose his life in the R.C.A.F. this year, Sergeant Pilot Nial Burnett having crashed to death in England during June the third.

Joe MacDonald, second year, was elected president of the student society for the coming year. H. Lloyd Henderson was the defeated candidate in the final ballot.

Gordon Bastedo was appointed to the position of Vice President for the coming term.

Reports were received on the condition of affairs pertaining to the abject nature of the Presbyterian (Continued on Page Four)

Board Will Continue Till Examinations Are Over

A board for advising students who are contemplating enlistment in His Majesty's Armed Forces has been set up at McGill. Mr. Matthews, the Registrar of the University, and Major Brown of the M.R.T.B. have consented to act on the board. The official designation of this body is the "Active Service and Employment Committee."

The particular function of the committee will be to give students advice as to which branch of the service they would be fitted for, and in which they could serve their country best. It will obtain all latest information about the three services.

The members of the board are to be named at the discretion of the McGill War Council, but Mr. Matthews and Major Brown will be the main consultants for students.

This committee is not in any way connected with any former board established for a same or similar purpose. The name "Active Service and Employment Committee" has been chosen expressly to obviate any such confusion.

Major Brown Consultant

Students who wish to consult this board are advised to go to Major Brown first of all. In his office will be filed all the information gleaned from various sources which will be required for this work.

All cases which have some special or particular aspect will be referred by Major Brown to Mr. Matthews. It will be his work to deal with such cases.

Duration of Board.

This board, which is now in operation, will continue so until all University examinations are well over.

The committee has been instituted this time for the benefit of those students who are leaving College at the end of this term and who desire competent advisors from whom they may obtain such advice as they need along these lines.

The suggestion that such a system be inaugurated was first advanced (Continued on Page Four)

Naismith Game Monday—Reds Meet Clarkson

Dalhousie Sportscene

by Lyle Brennan

Lyle Brennan, who is at present studying at Dalhousie, was a past member of the Daily staff and was appointed to the editorial staff of the Daily last fall. The following article will be interesting to McGill students as a view of the athletics being carried on at this eastern Canadian college this year.

At the top of the first page of the Dalhousie Gazette is the caption: "The College by the Sea." This fits the facts, for Studley campus lies less than a half mile from the Northwest Arm which picturesquely juts in from the open Atlantic.

Now I tell you this that you might be the more substantially impressed in regard to the climatic difference existing between Halifax and Montreal. Physiographic authorities would say that this is an example of a Maritime climate as contrasted with a more continental one. Of course, any average high school student could predict that summers would be cooler and winters warmer in Halifax than in Montreal—and he would earn his silver dollar on that one, for these are the facts.

But I digress too far. . . .

The purpose of this article is to summarize briefly what one sees in the way of college athletics down here at Dal. Now if we bear in mind this climatic difference, we can better understand the slight differences between college sports at Dal and at McGill. Let us begin with the fall season. This eastern autumn is very warm and lasts long enough so that football teams could easily continue playing till Christmas and still have better weather than our Upper Canadian teams have when late November brings championship finals. But the game played down here is English rugby rather than the football seen around Montreal. It is just as rough a sport, and there seems to be a time-honoured tradition which forbids the wearing of any semblance of protective pads. The players trot out in woollen jerseys and basketball shorts and proceed to kick one another all over the field, using a bloated form of rugby ball as an excuse for the carnage. Last fall the Dal Tigers carried their feline stripes to the championship of the Halifax City League, only to fall victims to the aggressiveness of a hardy team from Antigonish representing St. Francis Xavier University. I sat in on that final game, which was the best of the year, and watched the northern team completely befuddle the Dal lads mainly because they had a few clever broken-field runners in their backfield, whereas the Tigers seemed unacquainted with these tactics.

This is the "biggest" sport of the college year, and far outstrips all others in arousing student enthusiasm. A few of the football pep rallies with their cheers, songs, dancing, and general hilarity were something not to be missed. The Saturday games drew good-sized crowds in proportion to the attendance at Dal, and there were cheers, thrills, and usually a dance after the game.

Let us mention the weather once again before we look at the hockey situation. Quite in contrast with the enthusiasm shown in the old ice game at McGill, Dal's pucksters are a neglected lot of young men. They have had a better than average season this year but student support is still negligible. There is no inter-faculty hockey.

Basketball presents a brighter picture for this year at least. Dal has a good, well-balanced senior team which finished the season undefeated in regular league play. They should win the Halifax senior city league championship. The intermediate team fares less well in their battle for glory.

The Coeds, too, have a basketball team which is campaigning with mixed fortune this season. But speaking of the girls, it was quite a novelty for me to watch a game of field hockey played one day last fall. Hilarily resigned on this occasion for the fair ones were engaged in a friendly set-to with a pick-up team of campus boys. The field was greasy with mud and clay, and there was considerably more than just everyday field hockey to be seen that day.

Dal has rather a fine little gym built right on the campus, which is quite equal to the

Oilers Meet McGill for Possession of Dodd's Cup

Wicksteed Gym Exhibition Also Featured on Program

Monday will see the celebrating of the Naismith jubilee at Sir Arthur Currie Gymnasium, a celebration honoring the founder of basketball. The main features on the program, will be two basketball games, the first to take place between Westhill High School and Catholic High School respective winners in the Protestant and Catholic sections of the high school basketball league. The second game will be played for the possession of the Dodd's trophy. This game should prove one of the highlights of the evening for a strong Oiler team will face the best McGill can offer and from what can be seen at the practices a great deal of competitive playing is likely.

These two games are to be the feature attractions of the evening, and should provide a good display of basketball playing. Another of the main items on the program will be a gymnastic display, the 60th annual Wicksteed Gymnastic Exhibition. This is open to any student, and those taking part will be divided into three groups. Points and honors gained in this exhibition will in turn count in the intercompany league standing. Other attractions will be a free throw contest with one representative from each of the five teams in the M.B.L. league taking part, and following this there will be an exhibition of illuminated club swinging featuring the McGill Gymnastic Club. The whole evenings entertainment will end up with dancing, the music for such being provided by a nickelodeon.

COMMEMORATION

The many Golden Ball games which have been taking place all year have been in commemoration of the founding fifty years ago by Dr. Naismith of the popular game of basketball. The original game was played with a nine man team using a fruit basket to catch the throws. In fact a step ladder was used in order to retrieve the ball. This might seem a far cry from the game of to-day, yet Dr. Naismith, in laying down the rules for the game, meant it to be a form of bodily exercise, and because of this it has changed very little, except for the fact that to-day's game is being played with a five man team.

exigencies of student athletics. It has good basketball and badminton courts, men's and ladies' locker rooms and showers, as well as C.O.T.C. offices and stores.

Bernie Ralston is Coach in charge of men's athletics. He is a young man with a fine record as an athlete gained during and after his student days at Acadia and Dalhousie. Last week he stepped on to the floor in an exhibition basketball game and proceeded to score more points than any of his charges, who are the best team in their league. "Bernie" is quiet-spoken, clean cut, and is extremely popular with his teams and the student body.

I recall no dances nor parties during the football season at which there was not a grouping around a few ringleaders and singing the old Dal song, which rhymes to the tune of John Brown's Body: Come, sons of old Dalhousie, cheer your husky team! Rouse out a welcome to your men of steel and steam! They win the victory and tonight the birds will scream. "This is Dalhousie's Day!" Glory, glory for Dalhousie! Glory, glory for Dalhousie! Glory, glory for Dalhousie! This is Dalhousie's Day!

Gymnastic Display At Forum Tomorrow

On Thursday March 5th, the McGill Gymnastic Squad is to be featured at a Mass Physical Fitness Display to be held at the Forum. The McGill lads are to appear in the opening number along with select gymnastic squads from the YMCA's, the YMHA, Mount St. Louis College, Lower Canada College, and the Montreal High School. In all, some one hundred gymnasts will be seen in action in this special number which is being organized and directed by Em Orlick in his capacity as Supervisor of Gymnastics for the Provincial Branch of the A.A.U. of C.

The Fitness Display as a whole is being organized by the Quebec Physical Education Association, of which Dr. A. S. Lamb is the founder and Honorary President. More than two thousand boys, girls, young men and young women are to take part in this monster affair in which is represented nearly every school and athletic association in the city of Montreal.

Besides the contingent of Gymnasts, McGill will also be represented by the girls of the McGill School of Physical Education who are to be seen in a special folk dancing number.

Macdonald Wins Rifle Tilt Over G

Fine Shooting Exhibited By Contestants

The Intercompany Rifle Match which was run off last week at the Armoury, saw the crack-shots from Macdonald College steal the honours with a lead of one point over G Company. The contest was the result of the rifle practices held as part of M.R.T.B. syllabus.

After the defeat of the M.I.T. riflemen on Saturday last, these high scores show that the experience gained on the Armoury range will stand all the students in good stead, even if cross-hair and telescope sights are lacking.

G SECOND

G company tallied the victorious Aggies with a score of 366, while A company was third with 363 points. In spite of the fact that the two first teams did not have an individual high-scorer, they topped A company who boasted of Assaly with a score of 43 points. F and D followed close together with 359, and 357 respectively, while E and C held up the end.

The individual high scorers were Marshall and Vandray, both of D company, and each with 44 points. Assaly and Margette, of A and F respectively knocked up 43 points each to tie for second place.

The results were as follows: Macdonald College Coy. 367 G. Coy. 366 A. Coy. 363 F. Coy. 359 D. Coy. 357 E. Coy. 348 C. Coy. 313

Farmer Back to Strengthen Red Forward Line

The McGill hockey team is looking forward with great anticipation to its clash with Clarkson Teck on Monday, March 9 at the Forum. The Redmen's squad has already shown itself to be quite a team. It took on the Navy, champions of the Defence League, last Monday and were nosed out by the very slight margin of one goal. From certain reports, however, it seems as if the Redmen will have their hands full on that day. Clarkson Teck has already acquired quite a reputation for itself in these parts. Most of the games played against McGill were won by those hardy opponents from across the border.

Since this will probably be the last big athletic event of the season it promises to be a big affair. The M.R.T.B. band will be in attendance by the kind permission of the O.C. Lt. Col. Morris and if the present plans go through there will be some college colour and atmosphere with the Scarlet Key and the Red Wings Societies and Cheerleaders reviving to some extent the old college spirit of former years. Special attractions are to be one of the features of this game and these will take place on the ice during intermission.

McGILL'S HOPE

In Monday's game against the Navy, Bud Farmer, who recently returned to the game after suffering a broken leg played heads up hockey for the major part of the game but his old injury began to show in the final stages of the game. Sparking the McGill attack, Farmer centred the Redmen's first line between Morrison and Crutchfield and it was this line that carried most of the play to the Navy team. It is upon this line that the present hopes of beating the Clarkson Teck, are being placed upon. Two main attractions are being offered for Monday night, namely the McGill vs. Clarkson Teck hockey game and the Naismith Memorial Jubilee. Both promise to be rip-roaring affairs. The former attraction will be between two friendly enemies and the McGill team has promised itself, no matter what the cost, that it will chalk up a victory for the dear old Alma Mater.

The line-up for the McGill Squad is as follows:

Goal, Ritchie; defence, Owen and Ward; centre, Farmer; wing, Morrison and Crutchfield; sub: Keay, Smith, Young, Hilbard, Malenfant.

VALENTINE

Roses are red,
Violets are blue.
He told me so.
What do you think?

Ah, love! Hardly seems a year has gone by since we tore open the mail box in a search for anonymous love missives.

Valentine's Day and the sentiment it represents all goes back to St. Valentine, a bishop and a martyr, who was put to death at Rome under the persecuting rule of Claudius, in February of 270. The custom of choosing valentines on his day is of considerable antiquity. It was an old belief, too, that the birds began to mate on this day, which probably explains why bluebirds are so frequently depicted on the present-day cards. The story goes that on the eve of St. Valentine's the young people of both sexes used to meet, and each of them drew a name by lot from a number of names of the opposite sex, which were put into a common receptacle. Each gentleman thus got a lady for his valentine, and in turn became the valentine of a lady. The gentleman remained bound to the services of their valentines for a year (it doesn't say whether the lady was bound). We moderns don't go to such lengths, except for one remnant of this, which seems to be contained in the Valentine Box social affairs, where the gals decorate a carton of food in a very bewitching fashion, lug it off to the nearest schoolhouse of an evening, and watch the thing auctioned off to the highest bidder. The whole business is full of surprises, cause pretty boxes aren't necessarily accompanied by owners of like pulchritude, nor is the man with the fattest pocketbook always what we hoped the "teacup" reader would see in our cups. Then, too, we aren't forgetting those hat boxes covered with red and white paper into which we used to deposit our "bought" valentines when we were very young. Remember how your class popularity depended on the number of bought valentines you managed to collect from the youthful swains? Oh, we know how you got so many—we smiled 'n smiled, too, for a good many days preceding the opening of the box.

The sender of such love tokens usually shrouds himself in secrecy—the reason, of course, is obvious. We heard of one young man working in a downtown firm (said man was a confirmed bachelor), who for four consecutive years received a valentine with the cryptic "Your Adored." On the fourth year his curiosity knew no bounds, so he inserted an add in a local daily which read, "To my adored one from your Valentine." Imagine his surprise when "Meet me on the corner of Alberta avenue at 8 o'clock tonight," appeared in the next issue. Of course he kept the rendezvous, and of course the "Adored One" didn't. But the joke was on his fellow-workers, who trumped up the fun, for it started him on his amorous career, and he is now a benedict.

Just what message to pen when you're submitting your yearly entry to the one of the hour is really a problem. The man who wires his love the inviting, "Wouldst that thou would be my Valentine, O Babe," will be taking a likely chance of the reply, "Gimme the ring and bring on the preacher." More cautious males would do better to forestall a hasty answer by a tribute such as "Will you be my Valentine with or without?" Girls who really want to find out whether their big moments have worthwhile intentions should send a singling telegram and have the messenger boy give out with "You got me this way, Say what are you going to do about it?"

For the tuber, we think the ideal way to capture the prof's attention and the everlasting scorn of your fellows, is to send him a large, frilly heart and a verse inscribed therein to wit:

"I have the nicest professor,
I think that he's just great,
And if I had my way, you bet,
I'd never graduate."

Those unfortunates who figure all is lost anyhow, could comfort themselves with a one-cent brown paper offering and the message:

"Curses, grunts, and boredom too,
To h— with any more lectures
from you."

If you have recently been jilted or you have a sneaking suspicion that you're shortly going to receive the payoff, why not dash off a little ditty to the cruel one that goes something like so:

Out upon it, I have loved
Three whole weeks together,
And I am like to love three more

If it prove fair weather,
This should at least ignite a spark of curiosity, if nothing else. If, on the other hand, you are the gentle post-man type and fairly drool charm, why not enclose this charming little ode in a ribbon-tied envelope:

Here's to a girl, I'm thinking of you,
Where you are and what you do,
Wishing you were with me, too,
This is from—Ohhh— you know who!

Touching, isn't it?
Here's one that one of The Gate-way executives swears is the verse to really make the coolest co-ed exclaim with joy:

A boy is always prone to choose,
And aspires to fill his Poppa's shoes.
A co-ed tries to go one better,
She wants to fill her Momma's sweater;
And then she aims for things sublime,
And seeks to rate a Valentine.
With thanks and apologies to Esquiere.

Yes, my sweets, there are Valentines to suit us all. Can't you just imagine what the individual who penned this sonnet must be like—Oh, no, you can't but here's a valentine somebody we know once got:

My nose is pink;
My eyes both blink;
You're so lovely to look at,
I must be nuts to be high hat;
But I got me a beczuz to be all day;
'Cause de cutest little Judy in de joint.

Has just seen my redeemoin point;
I don't chew tobacco like some,
But I sticks me to Wrigley's chewin' gum.

While we dream up this guff, suggestions are pouring in upon us, especially from the advertising staff of our illustrious rag. The money jugglers have just expostulated this intriguing poem to send to the light of their lives, which they have decided to forward to some unsuspecting House Ecce in an attempt to eke out an invite to their Saturday ball:

The girl that I thought of today,
She goes to the U. of A.
I hope she'll be mine
This St. Valentine.

What more could anyone say?
We are fairly teeming with flowery thoughts on this happy love festival occasion, but, gee, we must take time out now to dash off some of our own missives. We did read, though, in Liberty that more greetings will probably be sent by girls than by boys this year, due to the pressure of war-time activities, so

Liberty suggests if you have a heart interest for the duration send him a modernized version such as:

Tracers are red,
Raid lights are blue;
No war can blitz
Our love in two.

FRIDAY THE THIRTEENTH

Shades of black cats and graveyards, essence of broken mirrors and spilled salt! "Double, double, toil and trouble!" Cross those fingers! Clutch that rabbit's foot! That day is with us again—that day of days, Friday the Thirteenth, when the air is electric with magic, when witches hover in the ether, and almost anything can happen to poor misguided mortals who do not watch their steps.

Friday has long been looked upon by some people as an unlucky day. For one thing, Friday is observed in Christian countries as the day upon which Christ was crucified, and for that reason is regarded as unlucky. In the past, also, criminals and murderers were invariably hanged on Friday, and so the sixth day of the week became associated with misfortune in the public mind.

Everyone is familiar with the magical power of the number thirteen to bring disaster—but when Friday falls on the 13th, what can you expect but double trouble, magic and supernatural happenings? The reasoning is quite logical—one multiplied by two gives two.

It was Shakespeare in his play "Macbeth" who makes one of his characters repeat the more or less magical incantation, "double, double, toil and trouble." But for the year 1942 we can amend this to read, "treble, treble, toil and trouble," for there are three days of this ill-starred year when Friday falls on the 13th. If you will look it up in your calendars, you will see that the unlucky months are February, March and November. So if you pass the first hurdle safely, don't breathe a sigh of relief and let yourselves go. You still have two more chances—perhaps they should be called mischances.

Superstition has been defined as a "belief in the influence of inanimate objects on human life and destiny," and as an "excessive credulity with regard to what is mysterious and unexplained." Enlightened moderns who have attained the heights of our so-called civilization are not supposed to be superstitious. Most people will maintain vigorously that they are not believers in supernatural happenings, in all omens, signs, and magic. But have you ever watched people on a busy street, religiously walk around a ladder upon which some man is working, even though it means that they must walk in the gutter. If questioned they would undoubtedly claim that they are afraid of getting paint on their clothes—whereas we know that the workman was not using paint at all. As for myself, I always walk under ladders, to prove to myself that I am not superstitious.

And what are some of the more common superstitions held by our fellow-humans? For a black cat to cross one's path is very bad luck, although there are individuals who hold that if it has a patch of white upon it, good luck will ensue. It is bad luck to spill salt, and the method of counteracting the ill-luck is to throw a little salt over the left shoulder. Yes sir, you just can't have any resulting bad luck if you do that, even though you are dining out. Remember that your host will understand.

To go back for something that has been forgotten, without first sitting down and counting to ten, is also to court disaster. So now when you see ten to put on his pants, and is warding off bad luck before he returns and puts them on. There is an old superstition, familiar to all, which promises seven years of misfortune to the person who breaks a mirror.

Some of the girls profess to believe that it means bad luck to pick up anything which they have dropped. Possibly this superstition has developed since women have been given equal rights with men, and the poor unchivalrous males have stopped picking up the ladies' gloves and handkerchiefs for them, as they did in days of old (when knights were bold and ladies fair). The girls have now succeeded in securing equal rights, and are merely trying to turn the disadvantages to their own advantage. (This is just a theory.)

To look at the new moon for the first time through glass is very bad luck indeed. But if one looks for the first time at the moon as it waxes and turns a coin in one's pocket at the same time, good luck is sure to follow. It is possible that good and bad luck associated with the moon bears some connection to romantic evenings under the romantic orb—but I'm sure I wouldn't know. For a couple walking down the street to separate and pass one on either side of an obstacle in the path will also bring on bad fortune, but this can be counteracted by saying, quickly, in an offhand manner, "Bread and butter." This bit of self-protection doesn't cost a cent—and bears a money-back guarantee.
